

KZN MANAGED FUND

AUGUST 2025

The KZN Managed Fund is a moderately aggressive fund that aims to achieve above average returns over the longer term.

The fund can invest across all local and foreign asset classes. The fund makes use of a blend of three good quality asset managers who have been given fully discretionary global balanced mandates. These asset managers have the freedom to select the allocation to each of these asset classes and the most attractive securities to invest in within each asset class. A portion of the fund is managed on a strategic asset allocation basis, where the long term allocation between the various asset classes have been set, taking into account the fund's long term aim. Specialist asset managers have been appointed to manage each of the asset classes and have the freedom to select the most attractive securities to invest in within each asset class.

Due to its relatively high allocation to growth assets (such as local and foreign shares and private equity), the fund has a high chance of capital loss in the short term, but is expected to achieve real growth of capital over the long-term. As a result, the fund is best suited to members who have a longer term (5 years or more) investment horizon.

The portfolio complies with the prudential investment guidelines set out in Regulation 28 of the Pensions Funds Act.

MONTHLY COMMENTARY

Markets reached new highs in August, bolstered by easing tensions as US President Trump reduced pressure on Russian President Putin. Significant headwinds are approaching the US consumer, however, driven primarily by rising inflation linked to tariffs. US companies have absorbed most of the costs from Trump's tariffs until now, but this burden is increasingly being shifted to consumers, which is expected to push inflation higher. Goldman Sachs forecasts that the Fed's preferred inflation gauge, core personal consumption expenditure (PCE), will rise to 3.2% by December 2025 on tariff-related cost pressures. JP Morgan estimates that core measures of underlying inflation remain elevated at around 3% or higher, and the effective tariff rate is projected to nearly double to 20% by year-end, magnifying the tariff impact on consumers sixfold. This increasing pass-through of costs to consumers suggests inflation may rise beyond current market expectations. The resulting inflationary pressures could unsettle markets in the near term and may dampen consumer spending over the longer term.

The eurozone economy faces mounting headwinds, including heightened competition from China, falling wages, tightening bank lending standards and political concerns in France. Against this backdrop, the euro may weaken further as additional rate cuts by the European Central Bank loom.

Trade relations between the US and China are showing signs of improvement, and China's stimulus efforts appear to be taking effect. Chinese retail savers are increasingly moving funds out of traditional bank deposits and into the stock market.

The US economy is experiencing a modest cooling of economic activity rather than a looming recession, but inflation remains the primary driver shaping market dynamics in the US. Recent producer price index data suggest that inflation could surprise to the upside, bolstering the US dollar and diminishing the likelihood of rate cuts. This environment poses challenges for equity markets, but - until inflation spikes materially - markets appear to favour a "Goldilocks" scenario, where growth slows sufficiently to moderate inflation without tipping the economy into recession. The Fed is now expected to cut in September, seeing tariff inflation as transitory. We are not fighting the Fed and remain overweight equities and underweight the dollar, but we are monitoring US inflation and central bank policy as key market influencers in the weeks ahead.

The FTSE/JSE Capped SWIX Index improved by 3.5%, while Industrials and Financials rose by 1.2% and 1.1%. The JSE All Bond Index increased by 0.8% and the Rand strengthened 2.1% against the Dollar.
