

KZN ISLAMIC FUND

JULY 2026

The KZN Islamic Fund is a moderately aggressive fund that aims to provide steady long term returns and capital growth.

The fund is invested in a wide variety of domestic and international asset classes such as equity, sukuks and listed property. The selected asset managers have the freedom to select the allocation to each of these asset classes and the most attractive securities to invest in within each asset class.

The underlying investments will comply with Sharia requirements as prescribed by the Accounting and Auditing Organisation for Islamic Financial Institutions (AAOIFI) as well as the prudential investment guidelines set out in Regulation 28 of the Pensions Funds Act.

Due to its relatively high allocation to growth assets, the fund has a high chance of capital loss in the short term, but is expected to achieve real growth of capital over the long term. As a result, the fund is best suited to members who have a longer term (5 years or more) investment horizon.

This fund is suitable for Muslim investors requiring a Sharia-compliant portfolio appropriate for retirement schemes.

MONTHLY COMMENTARY

A new AI model from Chinese company Moonshot sent a jolt through global tech markets in July, dragging down shares of chipmakers, memory producers and data-centre builders. It has deepened a concern that has been building for a while: Will the hyperscalers see a return on all their spending? AI-related capital expenditure is at record highs and has been one of the biggest drivers of stock market gains this year, but the return on investment is at risk if Chinese models erode the pricing power of US AI models. Prices for AI tokens have been falling, and the Silicon Data LLM Token Expenditure Index has dropped nearly 30% from its May peak, coinciding with the recent underperformance in AI hyperscaler stocks. The more optimistic view is that cheaper models will simply expand the addressable market and that the drop in token prices reflects additional usage rather than a price war. Token consumption has increased 1 370 times over the last two years.

The South African Reserve Bank (SARB) held its policy rate at 7% in July, despite building inflationary pressure. The decision reflects a deliberate trade-off: by prioritising support for weak growth over containing inflation, the SARB's hold is equity-positive, but it weighed on bonds and the rand, which both reacted negatively to the surprise.

Risks remain to the outlook:

- Brent crude rose above US$100/bbl as continued US-Iran hostilities and Houthis attacks in the Red Sea raised the risk of simultaneous disruptions across the Strait of Hormuz and the Bab-el-Mandeb, two critical Middle East shipping routes.
- Inflation pressure is not just about crude oil, it is also tied to refined products such as natural gas, diesel and jet fuel.
- With the US labour market showing renewed strength, the Fed has room to keep its focus on core inflation, which remains well above target.
- Tariffs are back in focus. On 24 July, Trump implemented Section 301 forced-labour tariffs as his stop-gap Section 122 tariffs expired; South Africa faces a 12.5% rate under the new measure. Trump has warned Section 338 could also be used for tariffs.

For now, the global economy is experiencing a period of exceptional growth driven by the AI capex boom. And overall, with no recession in sight, we remain cautiously overweight global equities, neutral emerging markets and underweight South Africa. The FTSE/JSE CAPI Index rose 1.2%, with Industrials and Financials gaining 0.5% and 1.2%, respectively. The JSE All Bond Index declined by 1.4%, and the Rand weakened by 1.0% against the Dollar.
